FARM FOR SALE.

The subscriber offers for sale his Farm in Sebec Village, containing six hundred acres, one half of which is in tillage and pasture, with a thrifty Orchard and mowing lands producing from sixty to seventy tons of hay. The buildings consist of a two story dwelling house and sheds, with two large barns and two smaller ones. The land may be easily divided into two good farms, and will be sold separately or together, with or without the buildings.

Situated within five miles of the Piscataquis Railroad, and within one-fourth of a mile of the contemplated branch through the village, this property must rapidly increase in value, and certainly offers great inducements for the investment of a small capital.

Excellent chance for a public house.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.

A special dispatch from Minorsville, Penn., says that a terrible explosion occurred last night at the colliery of W. G. Andenried in the Schuylkill County Mining region. The large boiler attached to the mine blew up, killing several and badly wounding a number of others. The engine house was blown to atoms. Up to this time the names of the killed and wounded have not been learned. The cause of the explosion was also unknown. Further particulars are expected soon.

RICHMOND MATTERS.

RICHMOND, Va., March 22.

All is quiet to-day. The funeral of Richard Bush, the policeman who was killed on Sunday night, took place this morning. In the procession were Mayor Ellison, the City Council and 250 policemen. The City Council met this morning and passed a resolution in memory of policeman Bush, in which the interference of Gen. Canby, by which Mayor Cahoon's resistance to the legally elected Mayor was prolonged under military protection was denounced. An appropriation was made for Bush's family. Mayor Cahoon's motion for an injunction will be heard in the United States District Court, tomorrow before Judge Underwood. Mayor Ellison has issued warrants for the arrest of the parties concerned in the shooting of Bennett.

FRENCH AFFAIRS.

PARIS, March 22.

The Journal Official to-day, contains a letter from the Emperor to the Prime Minister Emile Ollivier. He says: "It would be expedient in the present condition of affairs to adopt all reforms which will restore constitutional Government to France in order to put an end to that immoderate desire for change which possesses certain spirits who disturb the public mind by their belief in the instability of the present regime." Among the reforms which he has instituted, the Emperor places in the front rank those which touch the constitution and the prerogatives of the Senate. He urges M. Ollivier to concert with his colleagues for the submission to him, the Emperor, of a project for a Senatus Consultum, which will fix invariably the fundamental provisions growing out of the Plebiscitum of 1852, divide the legislative power between the two Chambers and restore to the nation a part of the Representative power.

THE COLLECTOR BAILEY CASE

NEW YORK, March 21.

Warrants were issued to day for the arrest of Collector Bailey, deputy collector C. S. Hillis, and Frederick Low, Bailey's cashier, on the charge of trying to defraud the government out of $100,000.

Mr. Childs waived an examination and gave $5000 bonds. He also made a statement that he never used any money for his own benefit, and has in his possession a letter from Mr. Bailey clearing him from any suspicion of having received money unlawfully. He says that Mr Bailey admitted that he was doing wrong, but seemed to think he would eventually come out right, and had done all in his power to return the money taken by him. He thinks the amount taken by Mr. Bailey will reach $100,000, the amount of his bonds. He does not think he has much available funds with him. Mr Bailey has never gambled or speculated to his (Mr Childs) knowledge.—Mr. Childs fully exonerates Mr Low, the cashier, who is his nephew.

District Attorney Pierrepont puts the amount of the defalcation at $120,000, and thinks it has extended over the whole time of Mr. Bailey's collectorship.

Numerous statements are found in Mr. Bailey's letters and papers which are equivalent to a confession, and he also asks clemency for his bondsmen.

No clue has been obtained as to Mr. Bailey's whereabouts or situation.

Tours France, 21. The High Court of Justice was organized this morning and is now in session. Among the conspicuous persons present, were Madame Noir, mother, and Louis Noir, brother of Victor Noir. As soon as the formalities were completed, Prince Pierre Bonaparte, the accused, was brought into Court, attended by the Captain of the gens de arms. The utmost stillness prevailed and the scene was most solemn. M. Greffier read the act of accusation. The Prince waived reciting his rank and titles. The usual interrogatories were addressed to the accused, who replied with great self possession. The articles going to prove his criminality were laid on the table before the prisoner. They consisted of a pistol, cane, hat and two cards.

BEECHER'S SHOT AT A SQUIRREL. Henry Ward Beecher in a star paper on "Chipmonks" in the Christian Union, tells this story of himself.

The first time that ever I fired a gun, it was at a 'chippy,' and I did not hit him. My father it was that let me trot behind him, a seven or eight year old, while he hunted through the fields. How my nerves screwed up when he took aim, and what a crash in my over-sensitive ear was the report! It was always painful and always an irresistible fascination. And so, one day, returning home, out ran a bold Chipmunk, and coursed along the wall with trailing tail, then mounting a stone, tail cock up, he said, 'Hit me, hit me, hit me, he, he!' 'Here, Henry, do you want to shoot?' 'Yes, sir—chee-yes, I do.' 'Get behind me—let the gun rest on my shoulder—now take aim—there, pull the trigger or he'll be off!' [illegible] all in a jig. Bang went the gun. 'Chigger-ree-ree' went the squirrel as he dived down, laughing into a hole.

Well, I've seen many a minister do the same thing with a sermon, and feel as satisfied as I did. To be sure I had not bit anything, but I had made a splendid noise.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

WASHINGTON, March 21.

THE GOOD TIME COMING.

The tax bill is slowly going through the Ways and Means Committee. Members are so reticent about their doings that it is almost impossible to ascertain the details of their labors. They are somewhat embarrassed by the conflict of opinion between the President and Secretary of the Treasury, the latter still holding that it is not advisable to make much reduction, while the former is for a reduction of 25 or 30 millions dollars. The Committee is with the President, however, and it is certain that Amendments they will propose look to the relief of industry. They will advise a number of changes in the administrative portions of the existing law, suggested by the experience of last year, to the end that the burden of taxation may be more equally distributed and the schemes of rogues defeated. They favor a rebate rather than a reduction of taxes, and are pretty certain to recommend the removal of all taxes on watches, silver plate, pianos, carriages and billiard tables, being the whole range of articles in what is known as schedule A. They are also likely to advise the removal of the whole or the greater part of what are called taxes on transportation, viz: on the gross receipts of railroads, stages, steamboats, canals, ferries, ships, &c., and may perhaps recommend an abatement of those on express and telegraph companies. The license tax on dealers in manufacturers of tobacco and spirits will probably be retained, as will also the special tax on banks and bankers. Most of the other special and license taxes are to be removed. The Committee has not decided what to do about the income tax, but the talk of members points to a reduction of the rate to 3 per cent. with an increase possibly in exemptions. It will be seen on examination that this work is mostly in the line of the recommendations made by Special Commissioner Wells. The bill is not coming up for two or three weeks.

THE RICHMOND UNPLEASANTNESS.

The Richmond troubles are now going into the Courts. Mayor Cahoon, whom Governor Walker is trying to get out of office, has applied to Judge Underwood for an injunction against Ellison to prevent him from exercising the functions of the position, and the Judge, after duly considering the matter, today issued the necessary warrant, which will be heard on Wednesday. Cahoon has ex-Governors Wells and Henry A. Wise as counsel, and has taken every step in his couse under advice. The Republicans from down that way claim that this movement on the part of Walker is the first step toward getting all the offices of the State out of the hands of Republicans.

Sinking Slowly.

Diseases that progress rapidly to a crisis are not the only ones to be dreaded. Canker or dry rot does not blast a tree as suddenly as a stroke of lightning, but unless arrested, it destroys it as certainly; and in like manner chronic debility, although it does not kill with the same swiftness of yellow fever, is as sure to sap the springs of life eventually as any acute disease, if not checked by invigorating medication. There is something inexpressibly touching in the spectacle of premature decay. Languor, pallor, emaciation, depression of spirits, and a distaste for exertion, are its ordinary symptoms, and they should be promptly met by tonic treatment. The best invigorant and exhilarant that can be administered in a case of this kind is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The stimulating principle of the preparation rouses the dormant energies of the system, and the strengthening and regulating properties give a permanent and healthful impulse to the vital forces thus brought into play. The failing appetite is re-awakened, the process of digeston and assimilation are quickened, the quality of the blood is improved, the secretions become more natural, and every organ that contributes to the nourishment of the body undergoes salutary change. By these means the repair of the physical structure is effected and its health and vigor restored. In no class of diseases has the beneficent operation of the Bitters been more marked and striking than in those characterized by general debility and nervous prostration. Ladies affected with these ailments find in this most wholesome of all tonics and correctives the safest and surest means of relief. It is strong to restore and powerless to injure. Such is the uniform testimony of "clouds of witnesses."

JOHN H. LYNDE, - - PROPRIETOR.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1870.

CALL OFF YOUR DOGS!

The Bath Advocate puts a query to us relative to General Hersey which certainly illustrates its unblushing assurance better than anything we could utter That paper was started with the avowed purpose of creating a third party, and now it comes to us to know if Gen. Hersey will go so far as to sacrifice the Republican party to the extreme demands of the irreconcilables who follow the blind lead of that organ Having published its hostility to our party in advance, it now asks us if the party is willing to surrender every other issue to this one set up by it. Its assurance is certainly more brilliant than its shrewdness Suppose the Democracy should ask us the same question, as they have as good a right, we should not certainly regard it as legitimately our province to notice it, more than the growls and carpings which usually come up from the same source

But we do not propose to avoid any issue of that sort And in this connection, we do not speak for Gen Hersey, except as we speak for every sensible man in the Republican party We say that the temperance reform should be advanced by every means at hand, and that those means if insufficient should be improved as fast as practicable We do not believe in sacrificing the party to any extreme measures The reason is quite obvious to those who reason rather than rant. Paramount above all other interests is the Republican party, because all other interests are dependent upon its success The national life is due to the Republican party and its continued safety is in its hands. One of the elements of its safety we regard the temperance movement It is useless to argue the rum that could befall that movement without the strong aid of the Republican organization, for every intelligent, reasonable man knows it The desperate assaults of the old Bourbon Democracy upon our party suggests simply its sagacity in judging that if they can overthrow us their days of revelry are unnumbered The suavity with which they flatter the irreconcilables in our party,—who are made thus to believe that they are an abused set of martyrs, and induced to make impossible demands—indicates only that they aim at our overthrow in their march to license in all sorts of debauchery. They very well know that with a united Republican party they are doomed to perpetual minority, because their sources of growth, the grog-shops and all their manufactories of attendant misery and crimes, are checked to a discouraging degree

No, we do not consent to the sacrifice of the interests of the Republican party to any question of policy as to any one of its articles of faith No one can misconstrue our reasons for this While we acknowledge no superior for zeal in the cause of temperance, we do not believe in throwing away the hold we have upon prohibition by attempting more than we can reasonably and safely accomplish We know that the law is not enforced as well as it might be enforced, we know that a good deal of work may well be done—Knowing these things we see no other way to improve but for all good men to unite in the Republican organization and do what they profess It can be done as well this year as any time Every one knows that whatever is done must be done by the Republican party There is then but one course Let us unite under the banner of the party which alone can constitute a bulwark to the encroachments of crime and moral corruption Let the men who have wasted their energies in bickerings because they have not been consulted in every little detail of policy resolve to give their influence to the direction of the Republican party That party can do all that any party will do for reform, but as the first requisite to a powerful, united movement the irreconcilables must call their dogs off its heels

A Tammany Judge has now exceeded even the ordinary venality of that craft. In the case of Elections-Inspector John Lynch in Brooklyn on Monday, it was proved positively by one of the inspectors, that Lynch kept a list of the illegal voters, and before the closing of the polls, wanted to enter them on the check book, but the other inspectors would not let him, that Lynch added the names on the check book himself on the day of the election, that he admitted the fact and it also appears by the books shown The poll has certified by Lynch himself shows that a number of persons did vote that are not registered and a great many voted that gave false names and a false place of residence, as upon making inquiry, it was ascertained that no such persons resided at the places they gave as their residences Though the fraud was admitted by Lynch and was corroborated by evidence, Judge Gilbert would not let the case go before the jury, remarking, "That there was not sufficient evidence in the above facts to put the defendant on his defence, or to call for an examination."

The District Attorney remarked that the case was so palpably certain as to the guilt of Lynch that he could have summed it up before the jury in five minutes He intends to publish the evidence verbatim in this case that the public may learn the character of the men Judge Gilbert acquits But Lynch was faithful to Tammany, which made this astute Judge, and what else could he do? It matters little that the outside world may impertinently ask if now the depth of judicial infamy has not been found

And yet there comes another complaint of British heartlessness A London telegram says The passengers of the steamer Samaria which arrived at Queenstown at 9 o'clock, Monday evening, complain of the Captain of a steamer which they suppose to have been the Manhatten. It seems that the steamer passed within a a short distance of the Samaria several days ago and though her signals of distress were flying the captain utterly ignored her signals.

Governor Walker in reply to Gen. Canby's letter explaining the reasons for his interference with troops in the recent troubles in Richmond, says he is glad that Gen. Canby concedes that there is no warrant or authority to be found in the Constitution or laws of the United States for Gen. Canby's action on Friday last. As for the General's instruction, the Governor says that they would not justify his action, if construed by the light of the law. Such a construction as the General gives these instructions would soon reduce the United States army to a mere police force, superseding the State and municipal conservators of peace throughout the country The Governor expresses his confident belief that but for military interference the disgraceful rebellion against the lawfully constituted authorities of the city would not have lasted an hour The Governor feels sure, from his knowledge of the statesmanlike ability of both the President and the Secretary of War they will relieve Gen. Canby of the duty of executing orders which, under his construction, cannot be executed without a violation of the fundamental laws of the United States.

At a meeting of the Free Masons in New York city, a large sum was subscribed towards erecting a Masonic Temple and Asylum for aged Masons, subject to the exclusive control of Masons. The building will cost half a million.

MAINE GENERAL HOSPITAL

The grants of lands and money, provided by the resolve which has just passed the Legislature in favor of the Maine General Hospital, are conditional.

The grant of the Arsenal lot on Bramhall's hill, Portland is not to take effect till the Governor certifies that the sum of $25,000 has been raised by private subscription Of the $20,000 in money appropriated by the State, $10,000 is to be paid when $10 000 raised by private subscription, has been expended on the hospital building, and the remaining $10 000 when an additional sum of $10 000 has been raised and expended

The work of soliciting subscriptions has just begun, and the sum of $20,000 (more than enough to entitle the hospital to the Arsenal lot) has already been obtained Hon John B Brown and Andrew Spring Esq have each given $5,000, and other donations of as large sums are anticipated Several gentlemen have subscribed $1000 each From the interest manifested in the matter in all parts of the State, there is little doubt that the Hospital will not only be endowed with the $80 000 which the executive committee think necessary to obtain before the enterprise can be initiated, but that the whole amount of public and private subscriptions will reach $100,000

The Hospital is to be under the control of a board of directors, who would choose the officers The Hospital is intended to benefit several classes First, the poor who have no means at home to provide for medical attendance Second, persons in moderate circumstances who have no homes, or whose homes are distant, who can procure necessary attention for a fair recompense Third persons of means who live at hotels, and desire to pay liberally for good apartments and treatment during disease Fourth, wealthy persons from distant towns afflicted with obscure or chronic diseases Suitable subjects are admitted on application by letter or otherwise to the admitting physician who gives a written permit, but in all cases of sudden accident or injury of a serious character immediate entrance is given without this formality. The Hospital will be liberally supported by those who are able to pay for it accommodations, but a good part of its support will necessarily come from charity

Mr Poland of Vt., gave notice of a substitute resolution against Booker, on the ground that he was disqualified by active participation in the rebellion

A petition was presented from 583 bank clerks of New York city for a repeal of the income tax, and from citizens of New York for a removal of the duty on pig lead

The special order—the bill abolishing polygamy—was then taken up, and Mr Ward of N Y a member of the Committee on Territories, which reported the bill addressed the House in support of the measure and in reply to Mr Fitche's speech about a month since He said he had expected that the representatives of the Pacific States and newspaper Bohemians would work against the bill, and went on to depict in the strongest terms the enormity of the immorality and public danger in polygamy He derided Joe Smith as a vagabond drunkard and thief and Brigham Young as a brigand, who having become disgusted with the honorable occupation of digging potatoes, joined the Mormons and became their chief He urged immediate action, and that the experiment whether the "Church of the Latter Day Saints" was to be supreme and whether the dream of Mormon people was to be realized, that the American nation was to be broken into fragments, and mormonism rule?

Mr Shenck objected to the bill as too comprehensive and too rigorous and harsh in its details, and moved a postponement in order to make way for the tariff bill

Mr Butler favored the immediate disposal of the bill as necessary for the safety and efficiency of the new Governor (Shafer) of Utah and suggested that the debate go on, and that a vote be taken to-day or to-morrow

A motion by Mr Johnson of California to lay the bill on the table was rejected—40 to 1—all the Pacific members voting in favor, and all the New England members except Barnum against it

Mr Schenck of Ohio, then withdraw his motion

Mr Blair of Michigan, proceeded in support of the bill, and condemning the one-man power now supreme in Utah, and scouting at the idea that the Mormons will make any serious resistance to the enforcement of the law He also mentioned the report of Brigham Young's present visit to Arizona, for the purpose of selecting a new locality for the Saints Rest—which was denied by Mr Hooper, the delegate from Utah. He said Young would be home in a few weeks as a permanent resident at Salt Lake city.

Mr Dawes objected to the section providing for the selection of jurors, which gave all the control of the matter to the U S Marshall, and subsequently offered amendments to the section which were adopted, requiring the marshall to summon 100 jurors instead of 50, and out of that number select 39, who are to serve as grand and petit jurors

Mr Blair said the allusion in Fitch's speech to the gilded harems of New York and Boston, and painted Jezebels all over the country, that he (Blair) could see a very wide difference between the thing that hides itself in the holes and corners and keeps out of sight, defying all law and decency, and the conduct of the community that organizes lechery into law When the gentleman (Fitch) was apologizing for the Delilah and pitying the young man who fell in with her, he (Blair) thought to himself that it was painfully evident that the gentleman never would make much head way himself against the Delilah, and that the country should have to look elsewhere than to him to fight that creature (Laughter)

Mr Cox of N Y, explained that his vote to lay the bill on the table was not intended as an apology for polygamy, but because he believed all measures of persecution always defeated their object. He preferred to strangle polygamy by another process, and not by this measure

Mr Blair of Mich hoped the gentleman from New York would not attempt to strangle it by embraces (Laughter)

Mr Hooper of Utah, protested against the bill, which was designed to violate the dearest rights of the people of Utah, and fraught with evil

Here, for the first time in the history of the American government, was a proposition to punish citizens for their belief or disbelief—The bill declared that the social system which Moses taught, which God allowed, and from which Christ had sprung, was a crime, and that any one not simply practicing it, but believing it, was to be, not tried, but convicted, his wife turned out on the world, and his property confiscated for the benefit of the moral reformers who were the instigators of this bill.

Without concluding his remarks, the House adjourned.

BURGLARY AT LINCOLN —HOW A WATCH KEEPS TIME AND TELLS A STORY On the 6th day of September last the store of Mr E Nute in Lincoln was broken into and robbed of a watch and several other articles The circumstances exhibited at Lincoln on that day and as there were many strangers in town Mr Nute had little hope that he should be able to find out who committed the theft — He found on entering his store in the morning that a back window had been broken in to and a silver watch that belonged to his daughter which had been left hanging behind the counter was gone and he also missed some kid gloves, hats and other small articles A can of powder which he keeps in his store in another part from where his safe is situated was found near the safe together with a chisel and hammer The thief had endeavored to blow open the safe but failed in this on account of not being able to force powder through the key hole Mr Nute notified Harrison Piper a jeweller that the watch had been stolen and asked Mr Piper to look out for it. Mr Piper had the number of the watch on his book having repaired the same

The whole thing for a long time had been forgotten, until last Thursday the watch was sent from Springfield to Mr Piper's shop to be repaired. Piper at once recognized the watch, and notified Nute of the fact.

Mr Nute put the watch in the hands of Sheriff Scribner, of Springfield, and Saturday night Scribner had traced the watch through the hands of four different parties, and had found the real culprit, whose name is Allen D. Garry, of Mattawamkeag.

He arrested him in a lumbermen's camp, and had brought him a number of miles to another camp where the parties remained all night. After supper Garry had his boots off, and while Scribner was filling his pipe, Garry burst through [illegible] before Justice Tobin, Monday morning, and bound over for his appearance at the next criminal term of court at Bangor. Not being able to procure bonds he was committed to jail.

Great credit is due Mr Scribner for his energy and skill in ferreting out this affair, and it is only one of the thousand illustrations that the truth will come out in the end

BANGOR TEMPERANCE SOCIETY

The weather last evening was very unfavorable [illegible] condition our streets and walks are; still the City Hall was well filled at an early hour

In the absence of the President Hon I W Palmer the Secretary, John S Patten called the meeting to order and nominated for chairman for the evening W P Wingate Esq Mr Wingate upon taking the chair remarked that this was the first time that he was ever called upon to preside at a temperance meeting but he would say [illegible] with the people in this movement

The Mayor has shown by his inaugural that his sympathies are in the work With such a Mayor as we have and such a police as we may have very much may be accomplished Mr Wingate said he was in favor of moral suasion for the drinker and legal suasion for the seller He said he never made a public speech before in his life but the audience evidently thought well of his maiden effort

Mr Forsaith of the Seminary was then introduced Some subjects need illustration and comment but this subject has been argued and illustrated so much that it is almost an indignity to mention the subject of temperance Too many deaths—too many vacancies in the social circle—too much misery for any need of more than a mention of the subject

The question is not is there an evil? but how to suppress it We need to compare [illegible] Two classes have been advanced in these meetings—moral suasion and legal suasion We must have law All laws are imperfectly enforced So it is not an argument prohibitory legislation that the laws have not been rigidly enforced Would have moral suasion for the drunkard He would plead for the drunkard There is too great a distance between the advocates of temperance and the victim of rum-drinking To save them we should learn to appreciate the temptations that surround those whom we would rescue from destruction We must have actual knowledge of their danger We must place a higher value upon the manhood of these men

We want temperance men who will seek the young men who come to our city and throw around them good influence, and so preserve them from falling, and to seek those who are exposed to temptations and have begun to yield to them to draw them away to a more wholesome atmosphere. We must not shrink back in self-righteous horror from the fallen. We want temperance in our hearts, on hur tongues, in our houses, in our counting-rooms—everywhere. The temperance reform will not, cannot, go down, but will finally conquer

Mr Forsaith is a very rapid and eloquent speaker and no report of his speech can do justice to his remarks.

On motion of Mr. C. B. Lakin the pledge was circulated among the audience for signatures, and a committee of six was appointed for that purpose, and 14[illegible] signatures were obtained.

Mr. J. M. [illegible]

trouble. You hurt a good many people when you require men to get a prescription from the physician for a glass of rum—about two-thirds of the temperance men were opposed to this. The trouble is here. The respectable people don't want their liberties infringed

It is said the officers ought to enforce the law whether the people say so or not. No law can be enforced unless the people are in favor of it Would not take the law upon the poor creatures in the gutter But you may go to the man who sells him the liquor with all the law you please Moral suasion will not do for the men who sell liquor for gain He would use law to protect the victims from temptation

Dr Jeffards was next called for by the audience It was a new place for him but he wanted to show himself upon the side of temperance He signed the pledge forty five years ago and had lived up to it He fully endorsed all that had been said

The speaker said he was carried back to the time when everybody must drink Ministers deacons, fathers, mothers children — Moral suasion had a great effect then and nearly all had reformed and the law had to come in and do its work

Dr Jeffards alluded to the dissensions among the temperance men as having been an obstacle in the temperance reform He then spoke of the evil effects of the use of liquors in the war, but now thank God! the war is over [illegible] bring the customs of war into civil society He thinks there is not one case in one hundred where liquor [illegible] Would rather do away with whiskey [illegible] Whiskey is a great poison [illegible] dispensed by a physician

THE LOVER'S CONFESSION.

Come name my faults" I said, "that I
May mend it" So I made reply
To Laura—darling of my heart—
Whom long, in vain by every art
I tried to force to frankier speech
Do tell me plainly, I beseech
For my soul's sake, that while I live
I may repent and Heaven forgive!"
"His worldliness " at last she said,
And, blushing drooped her lovely head,
As if she feared I might infer
She meant forgetfulness of her'
And is that all?' I answered —"Well—
I owe the world's enchanting spell,
This fault is one I cannot hide,
But ah!—'tis not for you to chide,
Still, dearest let me worldly be
Since you are all the world to me!'

A GEM.

If a pilgrim has been shadowed
By a tree that I have nursed,
If a cup of clear cold water
I have raised to lips athirst,
If I've planted one sweet flower
By an else too barren way,
If I've whispered in the midnight
One sweet word to cell of day,
If, in one poor bleeding bosom,
I a woe sweet chord have stilled,
If a dark and restless spirit
I with hope of Heaven have filled,
If I've made for life's hard battle
One faint heart grow warm and strong
Then my God! I thank Thee—bless Thee

BY MRS H G HOWE

CHAP IV.

It was a very exciting time just now, in I——, and in fact, all over the State, for the time was drawing near for the State election and everybody was, as usual, intensely interested in the subject.

Political newspaper editors raised the war cry in behalf of their respective parties, each confidently predicting unheard of ruin and disaster if the opposing party was successful, and calling lustily upon all who loved their country, to vote the ticket at the head of their sheet, while the opposite party were unsparingly denounced as 'time servers," blind followers of the blind?," "intriguing politicians," and many other equally polite and euphonious titles

Unfrequented passage ways and dingy back offices now swarmed with a host of bustling and rather seedy looking individuals, each accompanied by one or more specimens of the Celtic race, to whom he expounded with wonderful volubility the doctrines of his own particular party, and the affection that that party to a man, entertained for all of 'our adopted fellow citizens," and the overwhelming anxiety felt in regard to their 'rights'—

Lords and youths who had not, as yet, attained to the honors and privileges that a residence of twenty-one years upon this mundane sphere is supposed to bestow, tried their unpracticed hands or rather tongues, in wordy conflict, much as the doughty esquires of olden times, tilted at each other with headless lances, that they might thus acquire the skill of which they could stand so much in need, when a knight's spurs should adorn their heels

There was a great deal of unnecessary and foolish talk, to be sure, but we Yankees are a talking people We must have our 'cut—cut—ca-dar cut" both before and after the laying of the egg, and if our more taciturn European cousins see fit to elevate the contemptuous nasal organ, on our account, why, let them— it pleases them and does us no hurt But as I have said, or, at least, as I intended to say, the town of L—— was in an unusual ferment, for it was no small honor that any one of her sons should be nominated to fill a Senatorial seat; especially as the nominee, who was no other than our old friend Mark Hamilton, was a universal favorite with his townspeople and neighbors and every man, woman and child in the town was anxious that he should be elected

It was an unusual honor to fall upon so young a man, but Hamilton's natural good sense acknowledged ability and unimpeachable honesty, weighed far heavier in his favor than grey hairs alone, could have done, and the opposite party's hunts of "youthful inexperience" and "unreliability" had, as yet, glanced off harmlessly from the sword proof mail of a spotless reputation

Mabel was in a perfect flutter of excitement, dimming her bright eyes by poring over the closely printed columns of political newspapers, and worrying herself into a headache every other day, at some irreverent or doubtful remark concerning the young candidate

Poor little Mabel! In her innocent simplicity, she actually believed that those wicked editors cherished the most unmitigated hatred toward her unoffending brother, and on one occasion, she burst into Margaret's room her cheeks all aglow with indignation, and her blue eyes defiant through tears, exclaiming, excitedly as she held an unfolded newspaper before her friend's eyes

See this, Margy! It's the very meanest of all! and she read, as well as her excitement would permit, the following paragraph

"It is said that this Hamilton the nominee of the ——— party, while parading his republicanism before the eyes of the people, is, in reality, a thorough aristocrat consorting entirely with those whose only recommendations are a high sounding foreign name, and plenty of money with which to sustain their pretensions Such a man will not be likely to retain much affection for the people when he no longer needs their votes"

'A silly, malicious slur" cried Margaret, indignantly. "The man who could descend to such mean personalities is beneath the notice even, of decent people"

This to Mabel, but when, alone, she thought over the matter, a shadow crept over her heart, that grew heavier, day by day, with the unuttered fear

Is his friendship for us really a drawback to him?" and more than once Mark Hamilton wondered painfully at her averted face, and distant manner, never dreaming of the troubled thoughts beneath, that haunted her continually, with the cruel suggestion of an injury to this, their best friend

The indignation meetings, as Mark called them, of the girls, were vastly amusing to Donald, whose ill tuned jocularity was sure to call down upon his head a volley of reproofs that never failed to restore the young man to his senses, while the tearful rebuke in Mabel's blue eyes was far more effective in subduing his gay spirits than a whole volley of words from any one else could have been

In fact, Mr. Morton, who had grown somewhat suspicious of late, began to watch the two uneasily, as if half afraid that his nephew might be spirited away before his very eyes.

He fidgetted, he fretted, he hunted, and at last he found courage, one morning, as he sat warming his slippered feet before a comfortable fire to open the subject of his meditations to his nephew, who, happened for once, to be alone with him.

Donald, my boy, you may think it strange in me, perhaps, to be the first to broach the subject, but a father's natural interest in his child's future must be my excuse, and I would like to know what you and Margaret have decided upon in regard to your marriage. Will you take her to Scotland with you, when you go back in the Spring, or would you rather make some different arrangements there before you are married?"

Had Mr Morton, instead of asking a civil, and under the circumstances, very natural question accused his nephew of treason or highway robbery, it could not have produced a greater change in the young man's appearance, than did this abrupt and unexpected question.

Starting to his feet, the first flash of surprise fading to a deathly pallor, he confronted his uncle, with a look of angry astonishment, of which that gentleman took no note whatever, being apparently absorbed in the contemplation of the pale wreaths of smoke that stole upward from the open wood fire at his feet

"Uncle, and Donald forced himself to speak with composure

"I didna expect this question from you, for I aye thought that ye kenned yer ainsel" that cousin Margy an myself were nae mair than brither and sister, and the speaker threw back the hair from his damp forehead, with an air of restless impatience that did not escape the notice of his wary and companion who started in affected surprise, and fixing his eye sternly upon his nephew's face asked in a low, insignificant tone

"What is the meaning of this, sir? Do I understand you to say that you reject my daughter's hand?—that you are ready to bring disgrace upon our ancient name by breaking one of the most solemn promises that a man can make?"

The dark veins rose and swelled in Donald's forehead, and his hand tightened its grasp on the marble mantel, against which he was leaning, but he managed to answer in a tolerably composure

"A troth plight between two Parisians can be very binding, for they'll ne'er break it like their ither toys"

"A strange subterfuge!" sneered Mr Morton, still in that cold, unmoved tone so admirably irritating to a young and ardent

If I understand you aright you mean to say that you consider the engagement entered into between yourself and cousin Margaret to be no longer binding, because you no longer approve of it?"

It was not a pleasant way of putting the question, and yet Donald was forced to assent

"But has it never occurred to you" a smile of bitter sarcasm played about the speaker's pale lips, "that another than yourself has an interest in this matter? You seem strangely oblivious of the fact that Margaret's happiness as well as your own is at stake

"I do no wish to force my child upon an unwilling suitor, but how can I see all the hopes of her young life crushed without an effort, at least, to save her? You say truly, that the engagement was a childish one, and although you did not say it, was brought about by my influence and advice. All this I admit but can you deny that the match would be proper and fitting in every respect? You are the last male representative of our family, and what so right and fit as a union between the two branches?

Had my boy lived, and Mr Morton stern up, quivered it would have been different and Margaret should have made her own choice,—which, however," he added, hastily she has done, already, as you well know for it was on her part no childish fancy, but a never varying tenderness and truth sufficiently prove"

And now, came swarming up, in Donald's mind a thousand long forgotten acts of kindness, a thousand expressions of endearment and affection, until his brain was in a whirl, and he could scarce collect his thoughts sufficiently to answer

"I canna tell,—it may be sae" he muttered abstractedly, But if this be sae, and he drew himself up proudly, and faced his uncle with a look of stern self control, "i cousin Margwad hae me keep my troth with her, I will not refuse, I canna gang my ain gate if it crosses her, for I have aye loved her too well to bring a tear to her bonny ee

The tone was resolute but a sharp pang shot through his heart at the remembrance of another pair of other "bonny, blue een whose glance, tearful or glad, had power to make his recreant heart throb and flutter with strange delight With these thoughts crowding upon his brain came a longing for solitude, a desire to commune with his own heart in silence and secrecy, but as his hand was upon the door latch, the voice of his uncle arrested his attention

Donald,' and the stern tone had a touch of how caught a thrill of tenderness, sit down with me a little while, and try to listen patiently while I tell you the story of my own life, that may go far to excuse me in your eyes for this spirit of determination that I have shown in regard to this affair between yourself and Margaret

'Katherine Seymore and myself were betrothed in childhood, by our parents and we grew up in the belief that we were destined for each other Indeed, I do not think that either of us dreamed of the possibility even of breaking the tie that bound us

"But as she approached womanhood and her childish beauty was fast ripening into the bloom and grace of maturity the proud spirit of her race also sprang into life and when after an absence of nearly two years from England I returned to claim my promised bride, I found instead of the timid, loving girl whom I had parted with only a few short months before, a haughty, brilliant woman who gave me her jewelled hand to kiss with the air of a princess and greeted me with the cool self possession of a woman of the world

I was angry and half abashed at her proud reserve, and instead of manfully claiming my rights, as her betrothed husband, I stood beside sullen and silent, angry with the very breath that kissed her cheek, and yet too proud to sue humbly for the love that I felt should be mine by right

"Fatherless, motherless, and with my only brother married and absorbed in cares and pleasures of his own, my longing for love and sympathy became almost unendurable and when the dark eyes of sweet Marie Grey looked pityingly upon me, I could read in solve arose in my heart to win and wear this sweet flower in my bosom But I strove to put the thought aside as a stain upon my honor, and called the gentle girl who shone upon me by the deceptive name of friendship alone

'Now and then, I caught the burning eye of my betrothed fixed upon me with a look that I tried in vain to interpret But day by day, she grew colder and more distant and the soft tones of Marion were more often listened to, as a counter charm against the irritation from which I suffered

"At length, I determined to seek an interview, and if, as I suspected, my proud cousin was tired of the engagement I was ready to release her from it at once

The interview was accorded with a coldness and indifference that still further irritated me and I know that my jangling was ill calculated to conciliate a proud and jealous beauty It is enough to say that we parted with mutual recriminations and assertions of indifference, and in one month from that day I was the husband of Marion Grey whose tender love though it soothed and comforted me was far from satisfying the wants of my heart and soul, in which were depths of which her simple mind had never dreamed and I well knew, in my inmost soul, however I might try to stifle the thought that Katherine Seymore alone, of all the world could have satisfied the higher wants of my nature"

Here the speaker paused irresolutely, wiping away with his hand the great drops that had gathered upon his forehead and nervously toying with the heavy tassels of his dressing gown, as if dreading to resume his story But this unwonted show of emotion was soon mastered, and he continued

"It was but a few weeks after my marriage that I made the terrible discovery, it matters not how that, through all I had been really loved by the only woman whose love could have satisfied my heart. But the discovery came too late, and I was forced to see the sad change that went on from day to day, in the beautiful being whom I had so madly loved and lost. The gradual fading of the once rosy cheek, the stern and as it seemed to me, vindictive look, that crept into the proud eyes, the half suppressed bitterness of her tone, and the scornful impatience with which she listened to the polite enquiries and remarks of her acquaintances who, ascribing her changed manner to failing health shrugged their shoulders, and hinted mysteriously of late hours and overtasked energies'

About the time that my son was born the sad news from Scotland of my cousin Margaret's death reached me. Its effect in closing her intention of taking charge of the orphan and their everybody understood the idea of a beautiful and fashionable lady becoming a nurse from home and society for the sake of one whose claim upon her was so slight but as she stood alone with no nearer relative than myself, in the world there was no one to really oppose her kind termination, and she went

You know the rest for you remember how as she grew in a few years from that time stern, cold and forbidding as and to the sensitive beauty of their boyhood
